

Samuel May Jr
21 Cornhill Boston Feb 2/60

Dear Cousin & friend,

Yrs. (to R. B. W. or myself) came to hand yesterday. I am very glad to aid you in any way, and have paid the several bills, as you desired, and herewith return receipts for the whole amount sent by you, vizt. $18.29

100	Crosby & Nichols	8.79
	Examiner	4.00
	Relig. Magazine	3.00
	Liberator	2.50

You will receive the Examiner's account, which young Mr. Fox says is according to their books.

I am sorry to hear of the plague this bad Brown's affair has caused you; but entirely agree with you that he ought to be thoroughly exposed, and stopped, in his impasture, if possible. But such things are very difficult to reach. There are many persons who are perfectly willing to be duped, - when it falls in with the line of their own prejudices & spites, - opinions such folks have none entitled to the name.

The decision of the Court is shameful, - unmanly, contemptible. If Republicanism wants to make Capital with the Claps, to whom such a decision will be pleasing, it ought to forfeit the Confidence of honest men. Some-dough-face out your way made haste to gather up the facts, and sent them to the Courier here - the vilest & falsest sheet published in New England - which of course made the most of them in a spiteful way. It had no allusion, however, to the Repub.^l as wanting to make capital of the affair, - strange to say.

Carrie May returned home last Monday eve - somewhat tired - but with quite glowing reports of her visit to S. and its pleasures. - Ade.
has not yet got home, but is at Leicester for a few days. She writes that she is quite well. It has been a large experience of the world & its ways to her - larger than she has ever before had - and one which will be,
I doubt not, a great advantage to her.
She is overflowing with thankfulness for the abounding hospitality & kindness shewn
to her in Syracuse, Geneva, &c.
With best love to Corina, Lucretia,
Charlotte, and all. I am, affly
Yrs. Saml. May Jr.

Father & Mother are quite well. Mrs. Follen's death is a severe bereavement to many.
